Let me ask you a simple question?

What would befall your organisation if a contractor whose contract ended took the source code of your key application with him or the salesperson who took your database of all your clients, contracts and sales plans with them? It would be quite devastating, right?

This happens every day within businesses. And the difficulty is identifying that it took place in the first place.

Interested in identifying how you can get the upper hand? Want to know what the four tactical plans that you can do to start mitigating this risk?
